Mt. Makalu (8485m)

Introduction

Mt. Makalu, The name "Makalu" is derived from the Sanskrit Maha Kala, a name for the Hindu Lord Shiva that translates "Big Black." Located in Nepal's Makalu-Barun National Park and Conservation Area. Makalu is an isolated peak whose shape is a four-sided pyramid. The 5th highest mountain in the world located about 14 miles east of Mount Everest. This mountain range situated in the edge of Nepal and China and it is an isolated peak. One of the hardest and technical eight-thousanders and it is considered one of the most difficult mountains in the world to climb. Which was first climbed on May 15, 1955 in by Lionel Terray and Jean Couzy of a French Makalu Expedition led by Jean Franco.

The mountain is notorious for its steep pitches and knife-edged ridges. The final ascent of the summit pyramid involves technical rock or ice climbing. South East and the Northwest Ridge are the main climbing route of Mt. Makalu. The 8485m peak typically takes around 55-60 days to climb. Most climbers are able to climb Makalu in both the spring and autumn seasons. However, spring is more suitable for good weather and snow conditions. It is located at the coordinates of 27°53'21" N and 87°05'27" E. The approach to Makalu is beautiful and elegant, the Barun Valley provides stunning contrasts where high waterfalls cascade into deep gorges, craggy rocks rise from lush green forests, and colorful flowers bloom beneath white snow peaks. This unique landscape shelters some of the last pristine mountain ecosystems on earth. Rare species of animals and plants flourish in diverse climates and habitats, relatively undisturbed by human kind. With seven valleys radiating from Mt. Makalu and it's almost symmetrical four ridges it presents an incredible symmetrical elegance. Within this wide range of altitudes and climates, the Makalu-Barun area contains some of the richest and most diverse flora and fauna of Nepal. Diverse ethnic communities of Rai, Sherpa, and Shingsawa have inhabited the lower parts of country.

Mount Makalu is known for its spectacular beauty. Climbing is a highly challenging task and for many years it was not attempted. In the north of the Makalu summit there is a subsidiary peaks known as Chomo Lonzo.
